you can go out and do census forms they send around all the time and send them in, but I don't think it does any good. I don't know whether they even read them or not. But just something where they put that in their budget for money they spent this year so they get more the following year, right?

[inaudible]. Who do you blame on that?

Ultimately, the voters. To be very honest with you, Governor [inaudible] just can't. I don't think there was anything better. I mean, we don't like what we've got, but I don't think the choices were there. We needed [crosstalk] people.

The lesser of evils.

Yeah, it was.

That's true.

So what're we going to do?

[crosstalk].

We really needed the-- yeah, we really didn't. And that was a scary thing.

Well, what scares me, thinking back, when [inaudible] was saying the budget's going to be a $6 billion deficit, everybody treated him like he was off the wall, from Mars. Well, how smart was that guy really?

Well.

He was a clown, but--

He did it pretty well.

He knew finances, obviously.

So state government, who's to blame? Beyond the voters who voted them in. State government? No one else?

Well, I think the federal government plays into it. Because some of our problems [inaudible] from there.
